PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

The Master in Rehabilitation Science (MRS) is a professional degree of advance studies in the specialized yet multidisciplinary field of rehabilitation sciences. The MRS will develop the rehabilitation professional's role in actualizing the societal integration (i.e. societal participation) of persons with (PWD) and those at-risk for (ARD) disability. The program integrates ethical practice, critical and independent thinking, and collaborative practice.

PROGRAM OBJECTIVES

The MRS aims to develop graduates who possess advanced competencies that will enable them to promote quality of life and societal integration (i.e. participation) of persons with disabilities or those at risk of disabilities in their role/s as health providers, managers and leaders of programs and projects, advocates for PWD and ARD, and evidence-based practitioners.

The following are the program outcomes for the various roles the MRS graduate will fulfill:

1. Develop plans and programs that focus on societal integration (i.e. participation) and advancement of the rights of PWD and those ARD.
2. Manage rehabilitation projects/programs that focus on societal integration (i.e. participation) and advancement of the rights of persons with disability and those at risk.
3. Utilize culturally appropriate information and communication systems in the various roles of rehabilitation professional to advocate for the rights of persons with and at-risk for disabilities.
4. Communicate effectively, in oral and written forms, evidence-informed program plans or outcomes that focus on societal participation and advancement of the rights of persons with disability and those at risk, in professional venues (e.g. publication in scientific journals, scientific meetings, symposiums, conferences, etc.)
