PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

The Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology (OB-GYN) of the University of the Philippines Manila, College of Medicine (UPCM) and Philippine General Hospital (PGH) prides itself in providing a world-class premier training in Obstetrics and Gynecology. In 1907, the Department offered its first formal residency training program, and since then has been offering not only the general OB-GYN training program but all the subspecialty programs recognized by the local and international specialty societies.

Today, many graduates of the residency and fellowship training programs of Obstetrics and Gynecology have become much-sought in their respective specialties - not only as clinical practitioners, but also as teachers in the academes, mentors in research projects, and administrators and leaders in the communities. Although the residency and fellowship training programs have prepared the graduates well for clinical practice, the additional responsibilities warrant an endeavor for a program to strengthen the academic and administrative capabilities of the OB-GYN practitioners all over the country.

The Master of Science in Clinical Medicine, with a track in Obstetrics and Gynecology is, thus a graduate program designed to produce such expert OB-GYN practitioners, knowledgeable and skilled in teaching, research, and administration.

PROGRAM OBJECTIVES

Specifically, at the end of the course, the student will be able to:

- Apply appropriate teaching techniques and materials in the various levels of training in Obstetrics and Gynecology, such as:
  - Undergraduate and graduate programs
  - Clinical programs
  - Other post-graduate programs
- Perform and supervise researchers in the specialty that can be used in the improvement of clinical practice and biological science.
- Evaluate and plan improvement in the organization and programs improvement and evaluate in the specialty.
- Contribute to the improvement of the clinical practice of the specialty through teaching and research.
